

THE VOICE CHECK

Does your website talk to your customer — or about yourself? Ten minutes, three steps, one honest answer.

STEP 1 — SEARCH YOUR SITE FOR THESE PHRASES

- ☐ "We offer..."
- ☐ "We provide..."
- ☐ "High quality" / "Premium quality"
- ☐ "Professional services" / "Professional approach"
- ☐ "For all levels" / "For everyone"
- ☐ "Individual approach" / "Tailored solutions"
- ☐ "Many years of experience"
- ☐ "Wide range of..."
- ☐ "Leading provider" / "Your partner for..."
- ☐ "We are passionate about..."

Every checkbox is a place where your website talks about you instead of to your customer.

One or two — normal. Five or more — your site is a brochure, not a conversation.

STEP 2 — REPLACE THE DIRECTION, NOT THE WORDS

Don't polish these phrases. Flip who stands in the center of the sentence.

BEFORE "We offer professional training for all levels"

AFTER "You haven't trained in years and walking into a gym feels heavy.
That's exactly who we built this for."

BEFORE "Individual approach to every client"

AFTER "First we listen. Then we build the plan around your life — not the other way around."

BEFORE "Wide range of services"

AFTER Name the three things your best customers actually come for. Cut the rest.

The formula underneath every replacement: start where the customer is standing, not where you are.

STEP 3 — THE THREE QUESTIONS

- 1. Read your homepage out loud. Would your best customer say any of these sentences in a real conversation?
- 2. Could a competitor put their logo on your text without changing a word? If yes — the text says nothing about you.
- 3. Does the first screen of your website name the customer's situation — or your company's capabilities?

SHORTCUT — LET AI RUN THE DIAGNOSTIC FOR YOU

Take a screenshot of your homepage (a screenshot works better than copied text) and give it to your AI assistant with this prompt:

I just read an article about Donald Miller and his book StoryBrand 2.0.

Go through my screenshot and analyze my website on these points:

1. Is the customer the hero of the story — or is my company?
2. Is it instantly clear what I sell and what the customer gets?

Give me a full diagnostic: what works, what doesn't, and exactly what to improve — section by section. Ask me questions if you need context.

WHERE TO START THIS WEEK

Run the Voice Check on your homepage. Count the checkboxes. Pick the single most important sentence on your site — usually the first one — and rewrite it to start where your customer is standing.

Then read both versions to someone who matches your real customer. Don't explain. Just ask: "Which one is talking to you?"

Their answer is your strategy.

Educate yourself. Nobody else will.
